

Students' Society Passes Proposed Amendments

Meeting of McGill Students' Society Held Yesterday in Union Ball Room — Poor Attendance — Amendments to Constitution Proposed by Alastair Watt — Seconded by Hugh Seybold — All Amendments Sanctioned by Members of Society.

A BARE quorum of 100 students necessary for a business meeting of the McGill Students' Society gathered yesterday afternoon in the ball-room of the McGill Union, and with very little discussion passed unanimously several amendments to the constitution of the Students' Society, which will do away completely with the annual and semi-annual meetings.

One half hour after the time scheduled for the opening of the meeting about 80 students had been collected in the ballroom. All the halls and offices in the Union had been combed thoroughly for any stray undergraduates. Finally a bare hundred were collected and the meeting got down to business. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Disposes Amendments

Alastair Watt, Law representative of the Students' Executive Council, and formerly president of the Arts Undergraduates Society proposed the following amendments to the constitution which were seconded by Hugh Seybold, President of the Union. The amendments are as follows:

When there is only one nominee for the Presidency of the Society, the date for the closing of nominations shall be extended 48 hours.

Three Day Notice

Meetings may be called on three days' notice by the President, or on the written request of 25 members of the Students' Society.

The financial statement of the Students' Society is to be published in the Daily before the 15th of October of each year.

The president shall be elected annually between the 1st and 15th of March.

Sub-amendments shall be carried by a two-thirds majority of those present at any general meeting of the Society, provided one week's notice is given and published in the Daily. If this notice is not given the sub-amendments may be made from the floor at the meeting, in which case a majority of three-quarters of the members present shall be necessary for its adoption.

These amendments were all proposed by Alastair Watt, seconded by Hugh Seybold and carried by the Society.

It was pointed out by the President that three days' notice means "at least three days' notice." Also he said that there will be a notice in the Daily two weeks prior to any meeting which will deal with any important future amendment. The meeting was adjourned at 5:55 p.m.

The effect of the amendments passed yesterday afternoon is to leave almost complete control of all undergraduate activity in the hands of the Students' Executive Council. Although in past years a certain check on the activities of the Council was exercised by the Students' Society, unless action of a very drastic nature is taken by the Executive Council, there is very little chance that enough interest in any of its activities will be taken by the general student body to warrant the calling of a meeting.

Physics Colloquium

"Electron Polarization" will be the subject of a lecture by Mr. R. L. Thornton, on Thursday, November 17, at 5 p.m. This lecture will be given in Room 210 of the Macdonald Physics Building and is the seventh special graduate lecture of the session. This is to be the only lecture on this subject. All who are interested are invited to attend these graduate lectures.

Skullduggery Rears Its Ugly Head On Campus

Any corpse, in possession of a sound set of teeth, may secure a ready market for his skill by applying to Lancaster 7740. The resident at the said address has formulated a plan to see if four out of five have it, and is basing his investigation upon the principle that if four-fifths out of one have it the conclusion is arrived at.

All scenes of bloody carnage must be avoided, however, upon the McGill Campus, and any other place that is devoted to the advancement of academic practice. The nefarious deed should be carried out in a secret place, such as the Redpath Library, where no one ever goes, and the head severed from the body with utmost delicacy.

To Abandon Former Name For S. C. M.

Students' Christian Assn. Changes to Title of National Movement

MANY CHANGES

University Graduates In Montreal To Be Allowed Membership

At its semi-annual meeting, held last night, with Lloyd Reynolds, president, in the chair, the Student Christian Movement in McGill University combined an important business meeting with a general discussion of the place of the S.C.M. on the campus. An amendment making many changes in the original constitution was unanimously adopted, to go into effect immediately. The former name, Student Christian Association, was abandoned for that of Student Christian Movement in McGill University, making the McGill association a part of the national Student Christian Movement.

The new amendment provides also that graduates of McGill and graduates of other universities, resident in Montreal, be allowed membership in the movement, as well as McGill Students. In place of the two separate cabinets for men and women formerly existing, there is to be a new cabinet composed of men and women, of whom at least a third are men and a third are women. The advisory board, also, will include members of both sexes.

Provide for Graduates

In addition, provision was made in the amendment for a graduate co-operative committee, and for a finance committee, made up of representatives from the student and graduate boards and the graduate committee.

In presenting this amendment, the chairman explained that the advantage of the change from Student Christian Association to Student Christian Movement, is that the McGill group thereby becomes affiliated with the national movement, widening its scope and its connections, and making its members nationally, instead of purely locally, connected with students of similar interests and purpose.

Before the adoption of the amendment as read, Murray Brooks, secretary of the McGill S.C.M., suggested an amendment to the amendment, incorporating further minor changes to the constitution. The amendment, as corrected, was proposed and unanimously carried.

As further business before the meeting adjourned Jean Dunlop and Jean MacDonald were appointed to replace members of the cabinet who had resigned. A Graduate Board was proposed and voted on, and two student representatives to the Advisory Board were elected.

Discussion of Purpose

The promised discussion of the purpose of the movement was introduced by a few words from the chairman, who stated that such self-critical discussion sessions were necessary to create the vitality necessary for the life of the movement. He gave the two chief criticisms of the movement as

Historical Club Hear Address On Deeds Of Mounted Police

Miss A. Languedoc Describes Activities of Mounties In Western Canada

OFFICERS ELECTED

Took Part In Putting Down Several Uprisings Among Indians

At the meeting of the R.V.C. Historical Club, which was held last night in the Common Room of the Royal Victoria College, Miss A. Languedoc, a graduate of '29, spoke on "The Mounted Police." Miss Languedoc pointed out the necessity of a police force in Canada, especially during the last century, when there were no railways to connect the eastern and western parts of Canada, and when the Americans could easily have taken possession of our western prairies.

Under great difficulties the police penetrated to the Rocky Mountains. The force subdued Louis Riel who had persuaded the Western Indians to revolt against English authority. They overcame "Sitting Bull's" tendencies to warfare and gradually compelled him to return to the United States.

Miss Languedoc continued by speaking of the Gold Rush of '98, which the Mounted Police managed so admirably. They put down the Winnipeg strike of 1919, and thus proved to the Canadian Government their ability to maintain peace and order. Miss Languedoc concluded her lecture with the well-known slogan, "They get their man."

Audience Amused

The audience was amused with Miss Languedoc's remarks that the men had the privilege of growing beards or being clean-shaven—in the latter case they must shave every day. Through the many hardships they had to keep smiling, even though they had pork and beans every day of the year.

At the beginning of the meeting the members elected a new vice-president, Helen Savage, and a new secretary-treasurer, Mary Ford. The meeting ended with the serving of refreshments.

Student's Directory Now Being Published

Will Soon Make Its Appearance On Campus

This year's Student's Directory is now in the hands of the publishers, and will be on sale about the middle of next week. It will be available from the janitors of all University Buildings and also at the Tuck-shop. The Directory will contain the names, both home and city addresses, and telephone numbers of all students, attending McGill during the current session. The majority of men's and women's fraternities, and lists of class officers of all faculties, will also be included. There are a few telephone numbers, however, which will be of necessity, omitted, as a number of students have failed to notify Miss Heasley of the same. The sum of ten cents will purchase a copy of the 1932-33 edition.

Speaks On Doughty

Professor Noad Continues Tudor Hall Series

Charles Doughty, a modern writer, will be the subject of a lecture by Professor Noad tonight at 8:15, in Tudor Hall. The influence of Doughty on modern travel literature will be pointed out in this lecture, which is the second in a series to be given by Professors Noad and Flies during the months of November, December and January. Tickets to a single lecture are 40 cents, with a special rate of 25 cents for students, while season tickets for the whole group are priced at $3.00.

Charles Doughty is noted as a travel writer, his most famous book, "Arabia Deserta," having influenced to a large extent later exploratory and adventure stories, among them Lawrence's "Revolts in the Desert." Doughty, although sometimes spoken of as a "neglected genius" has gained considerable reputation as a poet, and particular stress will be laid on his poem "Dawn in Britain," which is said to be symbolical of his work.

Juniors To Drive

Arts' Juniors, the class of '34, have made plans to hold a luncheon on Tuesday, November the twenty-second. This luncheon will take place in the Union Grill Room, and the President and Executive would very much like to get a good attendance at this affair.

Lady Bessborough To Be Present At Alliance Francaise

HER EXCELLENCY the Countess of Bessborough has graciously consented to honor with her presence a re-union of the Alliance Francaise to be held in Toronto on Saturday, November 19th. McGill University and the Montreal branch of the organization have been signally honored by the invitation extended to Professor du Roure to address the meeting.

As the subject of the address is "Anatole France, Man of the World," Professor du Roure, chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur, knew the author personally when he was in France. He has, accordingly, promised to reveal many personal and intimate phases of the life of Anatole France which have hitherto not been published.

The meeting will be held in the Women's Art Association, 23 Prince Arthur Avenue, Toronto. The President and the Committee will welcome all those who have invitations.

Professors Discuss Art Of Broadcasting

Speaking On The Air Differs From Oratory

SCHOOLING NECESSARY

Committee Appointed To Arrange For Training

Giving special attention to their belief that there is still much to be learned and much to be taught in the art of speaking over the microphone, a number of McGill professors met yesterday afternoon to discuss some of the problems that face the amateur for the first time "on the air."

A committee composed of Dean A. S. Eve, Professor Frederick Clarke, Colonel Wilfred Bovey of the Department of Extramural Relations, and A. Robert George of the English department has been appointed to conduct the work under consideration.

As is evident to the ordinary radio listener, the art of speaking into the microphone is vitally different from the art of oratory, or even from ordinary public speaking. It is not generally known that although some become accomplished radio speakers naturally, the great number of people have to undergo considerable schooling before facing the microphone.

The broadcast speaker has to consider that he is talking to his audience as individuals, no matter how great in number are his listeners as a whole. Another important detail is that he is not given the opportunity of using his face and hands to advantage.

The mediocrity of the average radio speaker results from his lack of training for the work. It is considered that this work will do something to alleviate the gap made in this respect.

Arrangements For Musical Association Concert Completed

A CHANGE of date in the Musical Association Entertainment was announced at a meeting held yesterday afternoon. The new date is Tuesday, December 6, instead of Wednesday, December 7, as was previously decided upon. All arrangements for the program are now complete, and rehearsals have started already.

Several campus musical societies have amalgamated to produce this entertainment, among them being the McGill Concert Orchestra, the Operatic and Choral Society, the McGill Band, and the Glee Club. This meeting will mark the debut to the Montreal public of the most recently organized campus orchestra; namely, the Concert Orchestra. The program promises to be one of great musical interest, and should be well attended. No admission will be charged.

Maritimers Holding Dance Shortly At Mandarin Cafe

The McGill Maritime Club's first informal dance of the year will be held on Wednesday evening, November 23, at 9:30 p.m. The Mandarin Cafe has been chosen as the locale for this dance, and tickets may be procured from any member of the executive: Bert Denton, Relief Williams, O. Kennedy, Eleanor Townsend, Miss Barbour, Ed. White, B. Hatfield. The charge is one dollar per person. This dance is not open to the whole University, but attention is drawn to the fact that members of the Club may invite non-Maritimers as their escorts or partners.

Impressive Function Pays Final Tribute To Veteran Soldier

Sergeant Major Butler Well Known To Various Units

OFFICERS PRESENT

Firing Party From McGill C.O.T.C. Forms Lane For Casket

Hundreds of citizens of Montreal and district including leaders in military and civil circles from all walks of life turned out yesterday afternoon to pay a final tribute to Sergeant Major Frank Butler M.C., D.C.M. The funeral service was held in the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul on Sherbrooke St. West.

As the funeral procession drew up to the church a firing party from the McGill C.O.T.C. composed of a sergeant, a corporal and twelve cadets formed a lane with rifles reversed. The casket, covered with a Union Jack on which reposed the deceased's tam, Sam Browne belt and sword, was borne into the church on the shoulders of the pall bearers. Following the casket, a soldier of the Black Watch carried Butler's medals on a cushion.

Service Impressive

At the church the Reverend George H. Donald V.D., M.A., D.D., conducted a most impressive service. In his prayer the minister exemplified the deceased and stated that he had a "character beyond compare and that he devoted his life to wholehearted service in whatever his hand found to do. He was straight and fearless; his conduct straightforward and clean." Dr. Donald continued, our late friend was "an efficient citizen, a patriotic soldier, a devoted husband, a loving father, a wise and faithful friend."

A piper from the Black Watch, (8th Royal Highlanders of Canada), then played the lament before the casket. Following this the Last Post was sounded by a bugler from the C.O.T.C.

C.O.T.C. Attends

To the solemn strains of the organ the casket was carried from the church to the hearse. The cortege composed of officers and men from the C.O.T.C., the pipe band of the Black Watch, the Bugle corps of the C.O.T.C. with drums muffled, a detachment of the Royal Highlanders and representatives from many other military units with which the deceased was affiliated proceeded to Pointe Claire. Here interment took place under the auspices of the Last Post Fund.

The deceased was survived by his wife and two small children.

The pall bearers were all personal friends of the deceased and served with him overseas. They were Reg. Sgt. Maj. A. Ovenden, R. S. M., L. Powell, S.M., J. H. Packham, S.M., J. Shepard, S.M., J. Hunter, S.M., J. Mien.

Among those present were: Lieut. Col. R. R. Thompson, representing the Military Committee of McGill University; Col. J. T. Ostell, Lt. Col. G. Ogilvie, Col. F. T. Mathewson, Col. J. D. MacPherson, The Rev. Maj. T. W. Bernard, Col. Wilfred Bovey, Maj. Eadie, Sgt. Maj. Morrison, Capt. C. R. Trenholme, Sgt. Maj. MacAllister, Capt. Renchan, E. Morton, J. Lowe.

Innovation To Mark Societe Re-Opening

Best Debaters Will Be Awarded Prizes For Their Efforts

The women's Common Room of the Arts Building will be the scene of the season's first meeting of the Societe Francaise. This meeting to take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock will take the form of a set of debates. All co-eds who wish to take part are asked to leave their names in the Common Room of either the Arts Building or R.V.C. The lists of subjects are to be posted in both these buildings early this morning so that the participants may have the rest of the day in which to prepare their speech. Therefore, the debates will not be impromptu and as the topics are simple as many as possible are urged to take part.

The names of the judges are not as yet known, but two prizes will be awarded to the winning speakers. This is offered as a further inducement for all who are bold enough to try their oratorical powers. No rebuttal will be necessary.

Tea will be served after the debates to the entrants and all others present. All co-eds, especially freshmen, are cordially invited to attend the meeting even if they do not enter the debates.

Redmen Earn Decision Over Columbus Squad

Last Minute Rally Results In Tying And Winning Goals. Final Score 2-1 — Vics And Canadiens Play 1-1 Draw.

ONLY four minutes remained of last night's game at the Forum when Jack McGill cut loose to tie and then win the match with two smart goals, the second of which came with only seven seconds remaining of the regulation sixty minutes. Columbus' one goal lead looked big enough to give them the verdict but the determined redmen were not to be denied, their goals coming after several likely looking attempts had gone astray. Gordie Crutchfield fed McGill the pass that resulted in the tying goal while the blonde winger rifled a waist-high shot from outside the defence for the winning counter.

Redmen Play Well

Bobby Bell dressed only nine men for the contest but all of those who dressed turned in fine performances, particularly Melklejohn and McGill. Kenny Farmer played this unusual dashy game several times threatening to break into the scoring column. Kelly and Ahearn were the pick of the Irishmen, Ahearn beating McHugh cleanly on a rebound late in the second period for his team's only goal.

Melklejohn and Painter stopped Powell after the latter had eluded the red front line on a nice solo try in the first period. Painter was penalized shortly after and Columbus commenced a rapid-fire attack, rushing three men abreast at every chance. McHugh proved equal to the task and managed to keep his net clear. Farmer banged a pass from Shaughnessy goalward but Muir blocked it, blocking a second dangerous shot almost immediately when the redmen started to swarm around his citadel. Kerr carried the rubber into the corner and laid a nice pass across the goal-mouth only to have McHugh clear it to safety.

Muir In Form

The Greenhirts peppered the McGill custodian with some hard shots right after the face-off at the start of the second period. Shaughnessy spilled Davis and frustrated a sure-looking goal as the latter was in scoring position, with only the goalies to beat. Ahearn carried the puck right in on McHugh but the red goalie stopped the hot shot that the Irish defenceman drove at him. Kenny Farmer gave Robertson and Shaughnessy two successive passes that looked good. Muir, however, was right on as he demonstrated again a few minutes later making a beautiful save when McGill got through the Irish rear-guard and had him at his mercy.

Farquharson almost scored on a nice attempt. The return rush resulted in a score for Columbus, Ahearn chalking up the point after a scramble in front of the McGill net in which McHugh stopped the first shot only to have the rebound driven past him.

McGill Gets Two

The redmen forced the play in the final frame McGill and Farquharson combining with Gordie Crutchfield for several threatening down-ice rallies. Kelly muffed a chance when he shot wide of an open net after Kerr had been forced into the corner and had passed out. Jack McGill shot wide on a pass from Farquharson but came right back a few seconds later to score the tying goal on a pass from Crutchfield. The McGill offensive gained momentum as the time sped by but it looked as though an overtime session would be necessary when Jack McGill took the puck with only ten seconds remaining to play, he sped straight down the centre line, flanked by Farmer and Crutchfield. Just outside the defence he unleashed a hard shot that came to rest behind Muir for the winning goal. Hardly time enough for a face-off remained and the redmen skated off seven seconds later with their first win of the year.

The second game between Victorias and Canadiens resulted in a 1-1 draw. Frank Carlin's team, recently reorganized, proved classy enough to hold the Clements' speed merchants in check and should provide plenty of opposition for the redmen when they meet next week.

Peace And Pinks

ONE of the most striking characteristics of youthful radicals is the way in which they proceed to credit their particular brand of radicalism all the virtues that can possibly exist. Let them devise or give their support to an economic theory, and that theory soon soars far above the fields of political economy. Better education, higher ethical standards, are all claimed to be part of its function, and the dawn of a new era — usually a rosy dawn, by the way, — waits only for its adoption.

In proof whereof one may regard certain journals that are devoted ostensibly to the spread of Socialism. We do not propose in these columns to discuss their ideas of constitutional or economic systems. But what we do consider ridiculous is the rhetorical and vainglorious manner in which they so often ascribe to their ideas the concomitant benefits of perfect peace, perfect justice, and perfect happiness.

The claim that the cloak of militant nationalism or capitalism is rearing its head, and that it is reaching out to envelope us all, inspires wonder as to the anatomical properties of this metaphorical cloak; it also inspires wonder as to how anyone can believe that peace will result from the adoption of socialism. Haggle and quarrel about disarmament as much as we like, war can never be abolished so long as there are thousands of people who delight in cruelty, who starve their animals or who beat their wives, or who revel in the mental picture of "bosses" sucking the blood of the poor worker.

Socialism and even disarmament may both be accepted in principle, but we will still have war. The logician may argue that the cause of war is armaments, and thence advocate the abolition of those armaments. But he does not carry his logic far enough. The cause of armaments is the mind, the selfish, or fearful, or greedy, or cruel mind that wants them, and thus induces others, neither selfish nor fearful nor greedy nor cruel, to desire them too, for the innate desire of self-protection.

Thus the only way to get to peace is to get at the mind. This is the task of education; — no, not in the insipid remarks of school-marm about "how natty war is"; but by a sincere and intelligent effort to develop a character that is just, broad, and strong, imbued with the fundamental principles of morality, and not selfish and grasping. When this is done it may be time to talk of perpetual peace.

And until this is done there is no use in talking about perpetual peace. There is no use in shouting loudly, threateningly, and ungrammatically that the wicked capitalists are the sole perpetrators of war. The true perpetrator of war is a state of mind that is as prevalent among one section of society as another. What we need is more superiority of character, and less sense of inferiority that manifests itself in yelling.

The Gloomy Side

ALL of us laugh and all of us are under the spell of gloom at some time or other. But the strange part of it is, that we are generally so for no reason at all.

Yet it is the gloomy side of life which is often most natural. We are sorry for others far more often than we laugh with them. That latter aspect is all to the good, and is one of the more pleasing human characteristics. This is evidenced by the results of the recent appeals made by the Federated Charities in the city, and is the underlying motive for all social service and legislation.

When we see people in obvious distress we commiserate with them. The cause may be minor but the attendant element is universal. A man fails some test or exam and everyone has a cheering word for him while wishing him better luck at the next attempt. A child falls, and someone from the hurrying throng will turn aside and comfort him.

We have the gloom in our life everywhere and all time. Yet we have that virtue which is mercy and pity, the spirit of human kindness that gloom incites.

THE BOOKSHELF

Balanced Survey Of The Soviet Union

Soviet Scene: By Frederick Griffin, Macmillan's in Canada. pp. 3 and 275. $2.00.

This is a book which it would be hard to over-praise. It is, its author says, "journalism, and makes no pretence of being anything else. Nearly ninety per cent. of the material was produced on the spot, much of it within an hour or half a dozen hours of an encounter. It was written in hotels, travelling in hot trains with my typewriter on my knees, frequently when I was so tired that I would have given all of Russia for a bath and a long, long sleep. It is reproduced here without change, other than trimmings."

As might be expected, therefore, the style is not always impeccable; there are occasional infelicitous phrases. But what the book lacks in finish it more than makes up in freshness, immediacy and vitality. I know of no work on the Soviet Union which gives so vivid an idea of what is at once the most important thing about the U.S.S.R. and the hardest to convey to people who have never been there: the "feel," the quality, the tone and temper of Soviet life. To read these sketches is the next best thing to a personal visit for Mr. Griffin is not only an admirable observer; he writes with understanding, he has penetrated to the essence. He disclaims indeed "any attempt at argument or explanation or dialectics." He has tried to be "objective, descriptive, factual," and he has succeeded. He is as realistic and candid as the Soviet leaders themselves. He extenuates nothing, sets down nothing in malice. There are few horrors; but there is plenty of grime, no glossing over of mistakes or hardships or cruelties, no seeing things through rose-coloured spectacles. Both in his manner of treatment, however, and in his occasional comments, he reveals a positively uncanny capacity for putting his finger on that most elusive, but indispensable, clue to everything Communist, "the general line of the Party."

Take his remarks on the position of the State in the U.S.S.R. (p. 15): "The State is paramount. It rules what men, women and children shall eat, what they shall wear, what they shall read, and even what they shall think. People are cogs in the machine, pawns in this terrific game." So far no extraordinary insight; these are the commonplace of the middle-class observer. But what distinguishes Mr. Griffin is that he does not stop here. "Pawns in a game," yes; but what game? "The game of building a new society."

The paramountcy of the state is "an expedient of the moment, a necessity in order to consolidate the fruits of the revolution and to lay the foundations for the ideal society of the future, a State whose economic fabric has been assured." That is the whole point, and it is just what the ordinary bourgeois critic misses completely.

Or take the chapter on the peasants. Most of it will delight the heart of any enemy of the Soviets. The lower deck of the Volga boat is "an abominable twilight of overcrowding and stench, a Black Hole of Calcutta; reeking lavatories, dark, damp, smelling corridors, an odour so thick that the head swam.... The picture one brings away of the peasants is of sodden people in masses who, socially, seem little higher than animals. There is plenty more to the same effect, on the face of it first class material for counter-revolutionary propaganda. But again Mr. Griffin sees deeper: "These are the masses who have to be raised by the Soviets. That is the task of Communism."

If it is hard to overpraise the book as a whole, it is almost equally hard to say which are the best chapters. Every one is packed with good stuff. Mr. Griffin has drawn his net very wide. I can think of few phases of life under the Soviets which he has not touched, and every chapter has the authentic ring of truth. Beginning with an amazing visit to a school where children of nine to thirteen put questions on politics and economics which would stagger the average Canadian University graduate, we pass to accounts of child welfare work, marriage and divorce (excellent good sense here), Lenin's tomb and a Communist funeral (a noble chapter), a "physical culture" parade, horse-racing under the Soviets, theatres, art and artists (a delightful remark here that "the best Soviet art would score a hit with those bourgeois who like their art strong); parks of culture and rest, the worker's rivers, courts and prisons, food, religion, education, the boom town of Nijni, protection of workers, the unique (and to foreigners often incomprehensible) combination of discipline and real comradeship in the factories; collective and state farms, the peasants, the hydro-electric development at Diapetrovsky, the Don coal mines and finally "Under Dogs on Top." Inevitably there are omissions and one's own emphasis would not always be Mr. Griffin's. Surely, for example, he overstates the "burlesque element in the famous production of 'Hamlet'." But I think most people who have any knowledge of the material he had to deal with will agree that in the main he has seen the Soviet Union steadily and seen it whole; has kept his balance, his sense of proportion, above all his sense of humour.

Of adverse criticism I have only four instances to offer. First, while Mr. Griffin is perfectly right in saying (p. 10) that to translate Russian prices into dollars at the official rate of two rubles to the dollar "has no meaning," I wish he had explained the reasons in more detail. The fact is that "money" and "prices" in the Soviet economy simply do not mean the same as the same words in capitalist countries. Under capitalism a dollar is a dollar regardless of who owns it or where he shops or how much he buys. But a ruble means different things to different people in different circumstances. Most of the apparently incredible stories of Russian prices are probably true, but one has always to ask, "Price to whom? for what quantity? at what sort of shop? in what currency?" The worker buying a limited amount of essential foodstuffs on a ration card at a cooperative store will pay one price; buying more or buying elsewhere, another; a non-worker, buying in the open market, a third; the foreigner, buying with rubles obtained at the official rate, a fourth (calculated in foreign money); the foreigner buying at Torgs in (where, though Mr. Griffin does not say so, only foreign money is accepted) or at "valuta" hotels (where foreign money is taken at a reasonable rate), a fifth; and there are probably other variants.

Second, I wish Mr. Griffin had told us something of the training of Soviet judges and lawyers, and had been more specific about the function of the Soviet barrister.

Third, "staggered" rest days — "the uninterrupted week" are fast disappearing.

Fourth, the repulsive description of the peasants hardly applies to some at least of the young peasants, between whom and their elders the contrast is almost unbelievable.

One might add that Mr. Griffin has been unlucky in his proof-reader. Russian names are treacherous ground at best. Mistakes in spelling or divergent spellings do not help the reader. Instances are "Komsomol for Komsomol (p. 34), Molotov for Molotov, Voroshilov for Voroshilov etc.

But these are small things. They leave untouched the essential quality of the book. Most people, whatever their political opinions, will read it with delight as well as profit; and even the most bigoted conservative will probably feel constrained at least to join in the tribute paid by Mr. Morgan-Powell in a moment of rare illumination: "My own impression after having read and re-read the book, is that the Communists are trying with all their might to put into practical operation a tremendous idea."

O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra"

At His Majesty's This Week

IMITATIONS of any kind very seldom approach anywhere near their originals, whether in art, literature, or something more concrete; that this is true in drama was very nearly proved by O'Neill in his much discussed "Mourning Becomes Electra." Not that it was not a good, and more than good play, the author of "The Hairy Ape," "Bound East for Cardiff," and "The Great God Brown" knows his theatre too well to fall on that score. Still it is a considerable task for even one of Mr. O'Neill's talent to set Aeschylus before himself as a model; and to attempt to produce the logical development of Greek "Hubris," in an atmosphere of modernity, and above all Freudian, psychology. That the imitation at all suggested the original is an astounding tribute to the genius of O'Neill; that it should be fine drama as well is little short of a miracle.

As this is the aspect of the play which makes it most unique to the audience, it is well to consider how and why it fails, for this is the only sense in which it did fail. The essence of Greek tragedy is the tenet held by Aristotle in his Politics, that in the tragedy the characters are not free agents; for example, the religious stigma in the Aeschylus trilogy falls on all members of the House of Atreus, through the original blood guilt incurred by their ancestor; in the Oedipus Tyrannus of Sophocles, Oedipus is forced by an early prophecy to marry his mother, not through any incestuous passion of his own. Through them all runs the traditional sequence of Koros (over-happiness), Hubris (the resulting pride), Nemesis (the agent of the Gods, jealous of this pride) and the Ate (the doom which punishes such pride). They are creations of the Greek religious belief, and can therefore have no significance for the modern audience. Our theory of Tragedy is the fall of some man or woman, through some trait in their character, or some action, from happiness and prosperity to utter ruin, often involving others in this fall.

"Mourning Becomes Electra" is a bizarre combination of the two with a heavy psychological element introduced to take the place of the furies of the Greek Trilogy; and it is the personal condition of the characters, far more than the thin pretext of Ate and David Mannon's hate, that hounds them on to their doom. Further, than this, the introduction of the Freudian Psychology forces O'Neill to trace back to the Greek the theories which began here; and he brings the whole tragedy down to a petty level of subjective conflict that effectually prevents it rising again, — except for moments like the final renunciation of Lavinia, — to the heights of Aeschylus. For the earlier trilogy was altogether objective in treatment; the characters were superhuman; there was throughout that intensely classical feeling of a permanence and universality, entirely lacking in O'Neill; and there was no sense of the continual selfish introspection, which sets the Mannon family clawing and pawing into each others' consciousness.

The weaknesses above are mainly those of feeling, but there were also numerous distortions of character made necessary by the modern plot. Lavinia's (Electra's) passion for Brant (Aegisthus); Orin's (Orestes) procrastination and weakness; are additions of the modern dramatist. The change of The Furies into The Eumenides, or "Kindly Goddesses," made necessary by religion, for Aeschylus, and Athena's championing of Orestes, are entirely absent from the new trilogy. Yet these are certain superficial resemblances between O'Neill and his model which carry the illusion, faint though it is.

Of the three plays, in the whole, the greatest is the second, "The Hunted," which treats of the revenge by Lavinia and Orin on Brant, their mother's lover, and her suicide. It is in this play that the action reaches its height, to fall through the suicide of Orin, and his loss of Hsael (the Her-mione of the drama) to the perfect resignation and utter hopelessness of Lavinia's retirement into the faded House.

In the first play, there is a continued sequence of rises in action, broken off like threads at the horror of the fate which all feel is imminent on the return of Ezra Mannon to his adulterous wife, and repressed daughter. The tension is finely maintained and the second scene flashes and sputters with the fierce conflict between Lavinia and her mother, over the love of Ezra, Brant, and Orin.

Elizabeth Risdon, already known to Montreal as the Queen of "Elizabeth", was a supreme personification of the relentless Christine, and entirely at home with the rapid changes of tempo demanded by the play. She dominated, without eclipsing, the power of Lavinia, who carries the final stages of the plot on her shoulders; and was the saving of the tragedy at the moment when it came perilously near melodrama, namely when Lavinia, to prove her mother's guilt to the wavering Orin, places on the dead body of her father, the poison that killed him.

Ezra, played by Lee Baker, was treated perhaps more sympathetically than he deserved, and Seth, the family servant (Walter Vonnegut) brought out cleverly the effect of the twisted Mannon mind on one who had associated with them too long.

Orin, played by Charles Brokaw, and Leona Hogarth's Lavinia, were examples of really capable interpretation of a state of mind so seldom found in life as to be scarcely conceivable. Brokaw brought to a very vaulting character enough strength and consistency to make his suicide and self-suggested madness logical developments in his attitude, caused by the fanatic incitement of his overstrained sister.

Lavinia, who runs through the trilogy much as a personification of the Furies in the Greek, so well modified her changes of mood and timing that she did not once over-test the tension of her audience, and brought the mess of lechery, adultery and individual conflict, to a surprisingly perfect wholeness at her final curtain, the one calm moment of the evening.

O'Neill can thank whatever Gods there be for Edmund Jones, whose sets were all that had been said of them, and did not a little to lighten the heavy burden of the actors, and increase the difficult atmosphere of the play.

If you want to see a really great drama, technically perfect; and an eloquent psychological study of the people in it; then see "Mourning Becomes Electra." But don't fool yourself that it's an adaptation of a Greek Drama. The dead bones refuse to carry their abnormal load of flesh. — ONYX.

Critic Calls Student Editor Incompetent

Madison, Wis. — Characterizing student government as "the right of students to make last year's mistakes all over again," Dr. Burges Johnson, writing for the October issue of "The Education Record," paints a gloomy picture of undergraduate publications which he defines as "house organs of a university."

Surveying the field of the annual, 100 universities and colleges were canvassed. College annual costs, it was found, range from $2,000 to $35,000, with the average cost at approximately $5,000. "If I call it $4,000, our 600 colleges spent $2,400,000 a year on annual publications."

Inability, Inexperience Cited
"Inability, inexperience, and immaturity of the amateur editors" make accurate estimates of the cost of the book impossible.

"Where everyone engaged in the business is honest, one must reckon with the dominating impulse to 'keep up with Lizzie.' Just at present it is the thing to have a 'theme or motif for the book.'"

"With each new editorial board trying to outdo not only all rival colleges but its own predecessors, the book tends to become more expensive each year. Since I am engaged in sketching a gloomy picture... there has grown up in some colleges a tradition that certain campus positions of trust are both college honors and means of financial profit to their incumbents. Few college annuals are intelligently budgeted in advance, and if it is understood that their editors may make money out of them, no understanding exists as to what is a fair profit."

Like to Grumble
"The gossip of a college campus sometimes suggests student grafting when there is no real justification. Boys in college, like the boys in army service, rather enjoy grumbling, or painting an unpleasantly distorted picture of conditions, though underneath there may be a strong sense of loyalty and a sincere optimism. One unfortunate outcome of this college annual business is that a student manager is sometimes charged with dishonesty when he is merely incompetent or inexperienced."

Discussing the solutions to the annual problem Dr. Johnson suggests, "At a number of colleges the book has been entirely taken over by the administration and students required to buy it. It has become virtually a part of official advertising. At my own institution we are groping in certain directions where others have led the way."

"Whether or not the college annual will survive, or whether it will go the way of other campus traditions, such as hazing, rushes, step-dancing, and the like, remains to be seen. The present-day undergraduate is enjoying a phase of sophistication that leads him to look with scorn upon things 'collegiate' and even his college 'annual' may be added to the dust-covered furniture in the attic. But while it continues as an extra-curricular activity, there is no reason why it should provide a few students, at the expense of their fellows, with nothing more than an experience in bad business methods."

Commenting upon the insolvency of a surprising number of college "literary monthlies" during the past decade, Dr. Johnson advances as one of the prime factors the breaking down of "barriers between town and gown." Whatever the causes, the fact is that barriers between campus and outside world have been broken down in ways that are beneficial as well as harmful.

Major Reasons Suggested
The low priced national magazines, the selection of editors from the ranks of writers rather than executives, extreme "student self-government," attempting to work without actual faculty co-operation, the failure to plan publication for several issues in advance and the changing tastes of the college citizenry itself are the major reasons suggested for the disappearance of the campus literary magazines. Another difficulty which is even more widely prevalent is that the student newspaper is often written by those of its staff least competent to write it. The directing editorships are positions of honor and profit, most earnestly sought. The editors must build up and maintain a competitive process that will weed out the unfit. After the junior year, unsuccessful competitors are dropped although they have had three years of experience and their work entrusted to less experienced sophomores and freshmen.

Campus Politics Harmful
Campus politics are, in their small sphere, as harmful to campus institutions as city politics are to municipal government.

Titular Water Polo Prospects Not Too Bright For McGill

Seniors Lose Again Last Night — Toronto Game Only Three Weeks Off

Y.M.H.A. WIN 6-1

THE boys did it again. McGill's senior aggregation of aspiring, perspiring aquatic poloists lost another game, this time to the Y. M. H. A. swimmers. If the Daily occasionally reaches the sacred precincts of Toronto, the lads there must be indulging in the gentle art of the Bronx cheer.

Varsity are at present the incumbents of the intercollegiate water polo throne, and, right now at any rate, it looks as if the Redmen will have to employ Jimmy Valentine to get the trophy out of the Queen City.

Redmen Badly Trimmed

The game last night was a walk-away for the North Enders. The final score was 6-1 in their favor, and had it not been for the valiant efforts of Chuck Wayland, in goal for McGill, the score would no doubt have been considerably greater. The only bright feature was the return to the fray of Davis, one of last year's subs. He tallied the lone goal for the Reds.

Defending the shallow end, the He-brew stars attacked right from the start. After two minutes and 36 seconds of the period had elapsed, Tucker scored on a neat shot which just eluded Wayland. Kushner was the next man to tally for the "Y." Twenty-five seconds later, Aronovitch boosted the Mount Royal aggregate to three. Schomer denied the twine next on a fine solo effort. Twenty-three seconds and another 22 elapsed before the next two goals were scored. These came from the hands of Oshitzer and Aronovitch. The latter duplicated his earlier scoring effort just as the whistle signalled the end of the period. Half-time score: Y. M. H. A., 6; McGill, 0. No penalties.

Offsitter Stars

In this canto, the Reds defended the shallow end. Y. M. H. A. pressed them into their own end of the tank, and Wayland was again called upon to make some remarkable saves. Oshitzer nearly tore off a couple of the goaler's fingers, as time after time he sent smoking shots to the corners of the net.

Davis tallied for McGill after four minutes and 45 seconds of play. There was no further scoring after his lone goal. Final scores: Y. M. H. A., 6; McGill, 1. Penalties: Worrall, Tucker, Kushner, Tucker.

Reduce Number Of Basketball Aspirants

Collegiate Line Up Will Be Almost Same As Last Year

THE pruning knife came into use once again last night when Coach Van Wagner cut his basketball squads by seven more men. The teams are now reduced to a minimum, but the men have as yet not been designated to a particular team, every player still trying for a position on the intercollegiate squad.

The Completion of the rugby season should see the return to the fold of at least three or four experienced basketballers. Hammond, Young, and Syd McMorran are still absentees from practices, but may be expected to put in an early appearance. Their presence will permit Coach Van Wagner to plan a more definite mold for his two teams, though it is anticipated that the intercollegiate will line up in much the same fashion as they did last year. All the men of last year's championship squad are back, and are confident of repeating.

Weber for City League

Weber—the lanky substitute forward of the past two seasons, who caught the fans' eye on more than one occasion—will devote his attention this year to the City League team, as the pressure of studies make it difficult for him to attend the more frequent intercollegiate practices. The addition of this man is expected to strengthen the forward line considerably, which may prove to be a big scoring threat this year.

Legal Lights And Arts Artichokes Meet In Interfaculty Final Today

Noted Rugbyists Will Battle For Rival Faculties — Attempt to Kidnap Manager — Game To Be Broadcast By Bawler — Hidden Plays And Extended Passes To Feature Contest — Managers Confident of Victory — Shaughnessy Will Referee — Starts at 2:30.

Battle To Finish

By "WINCHELL" BRENHOUSE and "RANTLAND GRICE" WALSH

A DASTARDLY attempt to kidnap Tweet "Knute Rockne" Wight, manager of the Arts team, was unearthed yesterday afternoon. It appears that the Law Lampons, doubtful of their ability to hold the greatest Arts football aggregation that has ever assembled since the Napoleonic wars, had contrived to coerce the signals from the Arts manager. Their plans were frustrated and the legal management was faced with the task of "bailing out" the would-be kidnapers.

New Training Quarters

To thwart the other equally nefarious schemes that have been concocted by the Legal Lights, the Artful Artichokes have congregated at the "Arts Club." Where they will complete their training. The reason given for the change of address was that the "Pig" was infested with legal spies.

When interviewed by the Reassociated Press at an early hour this morning, members of the squad appeared optimistic. "Plunger de Luxe" Anglin, "Hardnut" Beddoes and "Shock-troop" Maxwell, declared that today's classic would be a walk-over for Bill Gentleman's boys. This opinion was also shared by "Red" (k.o.) MacLennan, better known as the reason girls leave home. "What-a-man" Erskine then sang a few hymns just to show what he thought of the legal threat.

Condition Important

When asked if they had anything up their sleeves for the game, members of the Arts team smiled significantly at the Board of Strategy, who were huddled under a corner table. The board consisted of "Racketer" Albie Booth Wilson, former Melrose flash, "Smart-Alex" Duff, popular choice for all-faculty, all-American and all-world honors, and "Bad-Boy" Brenhouse, economist par excellence. With characteristic modesty the "Bad-Boy" refrained from commenting, but the Melrose flash was sure that the game would see the successful culmination of a four-year ambition. All were agreed that a lot depends on the condition of "Dynamite" Dixon, "Dent-em" Denton and "Whip-em" Wayland.

Bill Gentleman has put his life-time savings on the Arts team, including his best shirt, at the prevailing odds of 8-5. When interviewed he said: "The Dirty Law team will be dirtier when the Artmen have finished rubbing their faces in the mud."

Post Game Plans

After winning the game the Arts team will parade to the Arts Building which will be especially decorated for the occasion in the well-known "practical" manner and suitable mementos of the occasion. After that they will adjourn to the Arts Club and after that, who knows? It is rumored that all lectures will be cancelled tomorrow morning to allow spectators and players alike to recover from the after effects of the game.

Large Turnout For Gym Club Practices

Squad Will Engage In Three Meets In February

The Gymnasium Club is holding its practices regularly with a gratifyingly large turnout of newcomers and old men. Two of the old men, however, Jim Anglin and Al Hickey, have not turned out with any degree of regularity, and the Club hopes to have them back in the fold as soon as possible to complete a real strong team.

Gib Stewart has been showing fine style in his manoeuvres. Several newcomers are also in good mettle, Bill McKenzie and MacDonald, both freshmen, showing impressive form.

Have Three Engagements

The Club's meets are still far off. They will entertain the Dartmouth gymnasts sometime in February and the intercollegiate meet is scheduled for that month as well. The Redmen will also enter a team in the Provincial meet.

Law - Arts Engage To Decide Champs

Last Interfaculty Rugby Tilt Promises To Be Bitter Contest

Both Squads Confident

The long postponed interfaculty rugby playoff between the Lawyers and Classicists is scheduled to take place today, rain or shine, at 2:30 on the Lower Campus. Frank Shaughnessy will referee. With both teams confident on the morn of the classic, little can be predicted of the outcome of today's game. Judging impartially, both teams seem to be in prime condition, having prepared for the tilt for some time.

The only criterion by which to go would be the records of the two teams. Having downed all opposition with the exception of one setback each, the teams seem to be on a par.

Records Given

Law tripped up against the rushing tactics of the erratic Medicine team, when the latter squad took the former's count to the tune of two-zero. Arts dropped their colours against none other than the Law aggregation in their last encounter. Confident Law intimates that today's program is merely a repeat of what happened. Arts claim that it was their off day.

Enthusiasm is at fever pitch in both camps with the shekels being laid at even money.

Promise Keen Bouts For Saturday Meet

McGregor Crosses Gloves With Buchanan in Feature 135 lb. Encounter

THE program of bouts to be held this Saturday afternoon at the Field House has been announced. Bouts are slated to start at 8:30. A number of fast rounds should be witnessed at this, the first of the Competitive Boxing Meets.

Entire Program Given

Under the 165 lb. division, L. P. McGregor and Red McClelland will mix it in what promises to be a keen contest.

Six other bouts will be run off:—
135 lb.—J. Kirkpatrick vs. Ted Innes.
135 lb.—Frank Nobbs vs. Des Martin.
145 lb.—J. Johnson vs. D. M. Jainleson.

Formidable Team

By "LINAMENT" FORD

AFTER days of frantic bailing and sopping in which tons of sawdust were scattered over the field and puddles were mopped up by ardent fans, Major Forbes has announced that the Lower Campus will be in first class condition for the battle of the century between the Lumbering Legal Lights and the Arts Artichokes, commonly known as the Buffers and the Duffers.

Lampoons Ready

So great is the interest caused that all lectures will be cancelled on Saturday afternoon so that all who are interested may visit the teams in the hospital. Both teams are fielding a formidable squad and it promises to be one of the most thrilling, bone-crushing, ear-ripping debates seen since the R.V.C. won the title three years ago. We would strongly advise the person who is advertising for a skill in perfect condition to be on hand as there will be several lying around after the classic. (alas, poor Yorrick.)

When interviewed late last night, Coach and Pair Calhoun of the Law Lampons stated that he was too tired to give any information as he had just finished putting the team to bed, but that if he could get the team out of bed early enough today they would speak for themselves.

Game Broadcast

Early last evening Waterboy John Rowat was called into action when he had to go to the courthouse and bail out "Middle Wing" Duboyce, "Battering Ram" Mullaly and "Pusher" Patterson; but when he arrived he found that he couldn't bail them out... In fact he couldn't even pump them out. They will be released in time for the game, however, and will be found in uniform (prison uniform) when the whistle blows. All press notices will be handled by Bill Sellar, famous drawback on the Law Squad, who will also broadcast a running account of the game. One thing we can say in his favor is that he sure knows how to carry the bawl.

As regards the style of play the Law Lions will use, very little will be known until the condition of the mudd is ascertained. If the field is muddy "Knicker-Back-on-the-Bottle" Mitchell will use the hidden ball trick where "Stormy" Gales carries the ball under his sweater. To make it more deceiving for the Arts tanks, Gales will not even wear his sweater. If the day is fine, Mitchell will use an extended pass which he obtained from the C.N.R. and which should be good for fifty yards or until Xmas.

Campus Life

Loses Gaiety

New York, N. Y. — The effect of the depression which has swept from the college campus much of the gay background against which the undergraduate posed his studies has also adversely affected college enrollments, a survey of 24 colleges and universities of the country indicates.

In answer to queries from the New York Times, officials of institutions from Boston to Berkeley, estimated that the chief effect of the depression had been to modulate the carefree joy of campus life and to focus the attention of students on books and blackboards. The student of 1932, many of the replies indicated, has sold the flashy roadster and is buying second-hand books, and more than ever before he is asking for scholarship aid, low-priced dormitory rooms, and a chance to work his way.

Cultural Trends

An interpretation of the statistics and replies indicates a trend away from technical education toward cultural subjects. In general, the institutions, the enrollments of which were most affected by the depression, seemed to be those located in the farming belts of the middle west. Most of the local colleges and universities maintained their enrollments at about the same figures last year, and a few eastern institutions such as Amherst, Fordham, Harvard and Vassar reported slight increases in their student attendance. Columbia, with an estimated drop of more than 1,000 students, reported the largest loss of any of the 19 institutions.

At the University of California the "chief effect of the depression noted here is prolongation of the college period by students already registered and return of old students who once left. Enrollment of new undergraduates never attending before shows a tendency to decrease. Apparently students who formerly were attracted from college by offers of lucrative positions are now continuing their studies for lack of something better to do. On the other hand, students who have not yet entered college drag out high school work or enter local junior colleges to save money by living at home."

English Students

More Individual

Seattle, Wash. — Are English students more individual than we are? "Yes," thinks Dr. G. W. Stafford, comparing English and American collegians in regard to educational originality.

Himself an Oxford graduate, Dr. Stafford, recently appointee to the pastorate of the University Temple feels that any advantage of the British college system over ours is owing to closer co-ordination between major and minor subjects.

They are available for advanced research in Literature, History, Anthropology, Sociology, Political Economy, or allied subjects, in French or English; and in Mathematics, Chemistry, Physics, Geology, Biology, or subjects associated with any of these sciences.

Applications addressed to "The Secretary, Royal Society of Canada Fellowships Board, Ottawa, Canada," should contain particulars of the candidate's age and place of birth, a full statement of his academic career, with copies of original papers and any other evidence of his ability, or originality in his chosen field; also an indication of the particular work he proposes to undertake, at what institution, and under whose direction; and should be supported by recommendations from the head of the department of the institution in which the candidate has studied, and from the instructors under whom he has chiefly worked. To Abandon Former Name For S. C. M.

the opinion of the philosophically-minded about campus that the members are seeking in the movement only an "escape from reality," and the opinion of the seriously religious college people that the attitude of the members is "philosophical rather than religious."

A general discussion followed, in which those present gave their personal opinions of the advantages of the movement. It was agreed that the important achievement of the association is its help to students in forming a philosophy of life, giving them an opportunity to integrate, or unify, various college experiences—in which the Christian attitude is a strong influence. Personally influential aspects of the S.C.M. were presented by various members present as being the international conferences, the lectures and discussions, the social contacts—both local and national, and the study groups—with the resultant acquaintance with the teachings of Jesus.
